

Andrea Schroeder

Effective ways of counseling a large number of students with only a small number of career advisors

Students often demand a face-to-face counseling for their questions concerning career orientation. Career Services often only have a few careers advisors but a large number of students. How to deal with this challenge and not to “waste” resources of time, space and effective outcome is an important question for many career services.